A 2-part series which introduce executives to essential etiquette and presentation skills that build grace, confidence, and respect into their personal and professional life - When we were young, we all wanted to grow up to be a superman or a superwoman! Now that we have grown up and entered the professional world, we still have that ONE person that “I wish I could be like him/her.” That person is eloquent, well mannered, impeccably dressed, and just so graceful in every situation. Everyone admires and listens to this superstar. Opportunities and promotions always go towards him/her. Well, let me tell you a secret – YOU can be that Superstar Executive too! Elegance and respect are not born with but must be learned and earned through understanding, practice, and self-control. In Part 1, let us explore the self-growth that we need to help us look and feel like a superstar.

About the Speaker: Harriett Shing

Harriett Shing is a High Fashion Luxury Service Trainer, Confidence and Etiquette Coach, and an India-Certified Yoga Teacher. She was handpicked to be a fashion model by Eliza Wang, known as the “godmother of fashion in Taiwan” and “the most expensive hanger in New York.” Wang personally coached Harriett on runway techniques AND intense etiquettes, posture, and confidence training. It was important to learn how to be a Lady.

By age 22, Harriett was an experienced model and started producing large scale fashion shows. Soon, she was recruited by Louis Vuitton as their luxury service and sales trainer. She led her team to extraordinary achievement through her design training, styling techniques, and selling confidence. Next, Harriett moved to China and worked with more prestigious fashion houses such as Fendi and Trussardi. She regularly attended the Milan Fashion Week and styled celebrities.

Harriett has taught in the US, China, India, Cambodia, and the Middle East. As a certified yoga teacher, she adds in the essence of yoga. Harriett provides training in essential soft skills such as confidence, etiquette, presentation, and mind development so students feel empowered and ready for the next steps in their personal and professional development.
